June 2018

I just love bossy women. I could be around them all day. To me, bossy is not a pejorative term at all. It means somebody’s passionate and engaged and ambitious and doesn’t mind leading.

- Amy Poehler

President's Message

May was pretty busy. June is looking like it will be as well with a few key events that will be popular with our members including these three:

- June 6: Wednesday One - Speed Networking
- June 13: The Wrap Breakfast
- June 19: Cinematography Master Class

Earlier in May, I was invited to participate in the Unsex Me Here: Women’s Voices “OffStage” panel at the Shakespeare Theatre that was about how women influence from behind the scenes or offstage. The conversation was full of funny stories, amazing experiences, somber realizations, and honest reflections on how we (women) should be doing more. I want more of this!

This is our time! We must begin to really dig deep and band together to support each other. Creating opportunities and telling our stories is a critical piece of the movement. The idea that there can only be one is past. There is power in numbers and in the immortal words of Jay-Z, "number don't lie." We have to use our numbers to be the voice is the crowd that cheers even the smallest victory. The goal is that we all get to the finish line, which means you have to be in the race, at the race, or Docs anyone? The documentary landscape is rolling with some amazing projects lead by amazing women and some are even about amazing women! The Washington Jewish Film Festival screened SEEING ALLRED and honored one of the film's producers, Roberta Grossman. I was fortunate to moderate the discussion after the screening and get some insight into taking risks and staying the course. A few days later, I was honored to attend the Netflix screening of BOBBY KENNEDY FOR PRESIDENT directed by Women of Vision honoree, Dawn Porter. It was my second event in less than three days where women who worked behind the camera were being celebrated and recognized for their craft. I encourage you to watch them both and let me know what you think!

As summer time approaches and things begin to slow down, I encourage you to ramp up your efforts by volunteering, mentoring, or starting the conversation in way that adds to the power of women.

Here are some questions to munch on: What was your last WIFV event? What WIFV initiative did you support? Have you shared WIFV with a friend, colleague or associate?

The time is now to get involved and engaged.

The sun is coming out - let's go catch some rays!

Creatively,

Carletta

Save the Date: July 9 Doc Roundtable
How Filmmakers Can Engage with State and Local Policymakers
Caty Borum Chattoo and Will Jenkins will present the new AU CMSI report Movies & Grassroots Community Engagement: Documentary Films & State and Local Public Policy in the United States. The report provides inside perspectives from policymakers, filmmakers and advocacy leaders who have successfully contributed to shifting or creating policy agendas on the state and local levels, with the help of documentary films. Building on the findings of their first spotlight on federal policymaking, When Movies Go to Washington, this report offers documentary film teams and advocates tips for engagement in the state and local arenas. Because federal policy change may not be the most strategic option at a given time, a fuller understanding of state and local policymaking processes can widen opportunities for engagement on issues that matter.

AFI DOCS Film Festival & Forum - June 14-17

See Film Schedule here.

AFI DOCS - the American Film Institute's five-day documentary film festival in the nation's capital, supported by Presenting Sponsor AT&T - has announced its 2018 Forum. Open to all AFI DOCS passholders and festival filmmakers, the four-day AFI DOCS Forum will take place June 14-17 at the AFI DOCS Festival Hub at the District Architecture Center in Washington, DC. The Forum presents a variety of networking and professional development events and discussions for filmmakers, industry professionals and those with a passion for nonfiction storytelling. This year includes presentations on the increasing impact of documentary shorts, the relationship between virtual reality and documentaries, trends in local and international storytelling and more. The AFI DOCS Forum is supported by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and MEET THE PRESS.

The Forum will feature presentations about the journey filmmakers take from funding to distribution to impact campaigns. A discussion will be held on documentaries’ increasingly diplomatic function in convening filmmakers and audiences from around the world. Also, a panel will examine the rising trend of regional and rural focuses in storytelling, and the opportunities for local partnerships that come with it.

Programming at this year's Forum includes a discussion on "The Middle Ground," the segment of American society that has become almost forgotten, but increasingly crucial, as the country becomes more partisan. The session will explore how documentaries are being used to reach and engage with those in the political center.

As part of its ongoing effort to improve career sustainability for documentary filmmakers, the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) will offer an exclusive preview of a case study examining the Oscar®-nominated documentary short LAST DAY OF FREEDOM (2015). Joining the NEA will be the film's critically acclaimed directors Dee Hibbert-Jones and Nomi Talisman, who will detail the support they received throughout all phases of their project, from development to distribution. NEA Media Arts Director Jax Deluca will give an overview of valuable resources, networks and alliances in the nonfiction storytelling field.

The Forum will host "Documentary Capital," a town hall meeting on documentary filmmaking in DC. Local filmmakers, film offices, media outlets and nonprofit filmmaking support organizations will survey the state of documentaries in DC, while sharing their experiences and connecting with filmmakers and festival attendees from the DC metro area and beyond.

The State Department’s American Film Showcase, the Voice of America and Film Aid will convene for a panel discussion on "Doc Diplomacy." Representatives from these organizations will examine how documentaries with the power to shed light on global issues and spark change can reach the right audiences in the U.S. and around the world.

Each day of the Forum will also include a VR Showcase presented at the Festival Hub. Open to all AFI DOCS passholders, the Showcase features a wide range of cutting-edge immersive experiences, from political and environmental documentaries to personal, interactive pieces that highlight the latest in creative storytelling practices. Details on this year's virtual reality programming are available here.

Click here for more information on the AFI Docs Forum. The 16th edition of AFI DOCS will run June 13-17 in Washington, DC, and Silver Spring, MD.
